John Wanamaker's Store, Philadelphia.

These are the First Days of the Fall Business,

already the hum of activity begins. We launch the busy season with that prove to be strangely low. A few of these have been in store some days, but, to give everybody a fair chance, we held the announcements until the return of people from their holidays.

Some Special Things

A good lot of first-rate Jerseys at $2.25. These are all black. The colors are $2.50.
A Black Dress Silk at 75 cents, that until recently was always $1.00.
A fine Black Rhadama, 2 inches wide, at $1.50.
Half-wool Black Dress Goods at 12½ cents, which is just half-price.
All-wool stylish Plaid Suiting, 42 inches, at 50 cents. We sold the same at $1.00.
Another in stripes at 65 cents. Not dear at $1.00.
A quality of Lupin's Cashmere for 50 cents (all wool). The new tariff will prevent this quality from ever again selling at this price.
A Black Albatross at 25 cents, exactly half-price.
A fine Black Camel's Hair, 46 inches wide, at 60 cents.
A good 36-inch all-wool Cashmere at 40 cents.
An excellent Black Cashmere, all-wool, a yard wide, at 45c.
A very few much admired Embroidered Robes at one-third off of usual price.
A Bleached Muslin, full yard wide, for 10c. The best we ever had at that price.
The best Twilled, All-Wool Red Flannel we ever sold for 25c.
The best Canton Flannel for 12½c. We never could get so good a quality at the price before.
An extraordinary lot of Towels at 25c.
Eight lots of Ladies' and Children's Hose that are on our counters at 25 per cent. under prices.

These lots of Shoes that are amazingly desirable for the prices:

250 pairs Women's Straight Goat Button, $4.35.
172 pairs Women's Straight Goat Button, $3.25.
245 pairs Women's Curacoa Kid Button, $4.25.
186 pairs Women's French Kid Button, $5.00.
152 pairs Women's Kid Slippers, $1.25.
112 pairs Women's Kid Ties, $2.00.
110 pairs Women's French Kid Oxford Ties, $3.25.
141 pairs Women's Front Lace Walking Boots, $3.25.
131 pairs Women's Front Lace Walking Boots, $4.50.
150 pairs Women's French Kid Button Boots, $5.25.

China and Glassware we hardly dare to risk saying anything about, as the lots announced are nearly always sold out in a few hours of the day they are presented. Watch the city daily papers for the announcements, and if these lots are sold when you come do not be disappointed, as we have new lots in every day or two.

In Furniture. Young couples should see

The new Ash Suite of Bed Room Furniture for $25.
The same goods in Cherry for $28.

Our Works at present turn us out only four suites per day of these goods, so that first come, first served. Nothing like this has ever been done in Philadelphia before.

A fine frame Body Brussels Carpet at $1.25 that we are willing to endorse as a good thing.

We are not permitted to give the makers' names. The goods are new this season, and fifty patterns at least to choose from.

The first Fall Offering of Ladies' Robes are all-wool, of ample material, in nine varieties, dark, rich hues, and the new patterns are on the palm-leaf order. The effect is much the same, if not a full equivalent, as though an expensive Cashmere Shawl were dissected and made into a robe, as is often done. The expense being infinitely less—$25.

Also a few Wrapper Patterns, Persian, and with a decided Oriental effect. The olive, old gold and rich, dark hues are subdued in a broad border of consistent but curious formation, 10 to 11 yards each. $2.00 per yard.

There are other lots equally interesting, and new things daily arriving.

Samples of Dress Goods sent by mail; a "Postal" will receive immediate attention.

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.
These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.
BROWN'S IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Saved his Child.

Gents:—Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried BROWN'S IRON BITTERS as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, she began to mend and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required;" and when informed that the elder sister was taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS effectually cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such wasting diseases as Consumption, Kidney Complaints, etc.

POETICAL.

PERSEVERANCE.

A swallow in the Spring
Came to my granary, and neath the eaves
Essay'd to make a nest, and there did bring
Wet earth and straw, and leaves.

Day after day she toil'd
With patient heart, and ere her work was crown'd
Some sad mishap the tiny fabric spoilt,
And dashed it to the ground.

She found the ruin wrought;
But not cast down, forth from the place she flew,
And with her mate, fresh earth and grass brought
And built her nest anew.

But scarcely had she placed
The last soft feather on the ample floor,
When wicked hands, or chance again laid waste
And wrought the ruin o'er

But still her heart she kept,
And toil'd again, and last night hearing calls,
I look'd and three little swallows slept
Within the earth-made walls.

What truth is here, Oh! man,
Has hope been smitten in its early dawn?
Has clouds overcast thy purpose, trust or plan?
Have faith, and struggle on.

SELECT STORY.

THE WHEELRIGHT OF SONNEVILLE.

A TALE OF NORMANDY.

It was not congenial weather for a walk when I started from Fecamp for the village of Senneville upon a certain autumn afternoon. The sky was cloudy, the wind cold, and a drizzling rain beat in my face. The road to Senneville, ascending almost imperceptibly all the way, takes a zig-zag direction among the hills, varying the scenery at every step. At one moment you are looking at a steep wooded slope, which you imagine will have to be climbed, but around which you gradually pass; at another moment a deep valley meets the eye, with many valleys and hills beyond. Then suddenly, without turning the head, you find yourself staring at the distant port of Fecamp far below; and then away out among the hills and the valleys once more.

The hills on this autumn afternoon were thinly veiled with a white mist, drifting inland before a strong sea breeze. It was a mysterious sort of mist, which moved at a fixed level, never descending into the valleys, but sweeping always over them, and touching only the higher points of the land like a passing shroud. The reddening leaves upon the trees shivered and dripped and shivered again with a sound which seemed so melancholy that I was fain to quicken my step and look about for a house or some human being along the road, in order to remove the feeling of sadness which crept over me. But there are no houses to be seen along this route, only a chalet here and there half hidden in a grove of fir trees; and not a single person did meet coming or going.

It was therefore with a sense of considerable relief that I presently came upon the broad highway, stretching straight as a dart across a flat extent of country, where isolated farms, surrounded snugly with trees, were to be seen looking like groves planted in well-defined squares. Some paces back from the road, close at hand, was the old village inn for which I was bound. Beside this auberge at Senneville there are two or three cottages, and there is, between them and the inn, a wheelright's house and shed. This group of buildings stand alone on the main road. The village, which is composed of scattered dwellings opposite to the inn across the fields, extends in the direction of the sea, but is partly concealed behind trees, where the church steeple rises up, the only prominent object on this misty afternoon.

As I approached the inn and was passing the wheelwright's I heard angry voices, as though in dispute, and as I come nearer I saw two figures standing within the shed—a young man whom I recognized as the wheelwright, and a girl, the daughter of the aubergiste next door. The man had a forbidding face, and at this moment, when his small black eyes were flashing with anger and his thick jaw firmly set, it was the face of an imp of darkness. He was short, almost dwarfish, and in his hand, with his powerful hand uplifted, he held a large hammer. "Jealous!" said he, striking a heavy blow on the iron hoop at which he was working, "Have I not good reason to be jealous? He is always coming here."

"That is not true, Faubert," said the girl, quickly; "he seldom comes near Senneville." She cast at the man an indignant glance, and her large eyes filled with tears.

"Ah," said Faubert, with another heavy blow, "I don't know that. You meet him—that's evident. I saw you at Fecamp, in the market place together last Saturday. Is not that true, Marie?"

Marie folded her arms, and, raising her handsome face, replied: "What then? There is no harm in that."

The wheelwright answered in a passionate tone, though too low for the words to reach me. At the same time he struck heavy blows upon the iron hoop one after another, in a manner which bore significance in every stroke. Then, looking up, he caught sight of me, and his angry expression softened as he slightly raised his cap.

The girl turned and welcomed me with a smile struggling through her tears. "Good evening, Monsieur Parker," said she. "Come into the house, sir. You look cold." She led the way as she spoke towards the auberge, I followed, the sound of the wheelwright's hammer still ringing in my ears as I stepped into the inn.

On the left hand side of the entrance there was a cafe, with wooden tables chairs ranged round the walls, where I saw through the glass door some workmen, talking loudly, drinking, and playing dominos. The room on the opposite side, which I now entered, was half cafe, half kitchen. A long table stood under the windows; and at the end of this table, nearest to the fire, was seated, with a cup of coffee and a glass of cognac at his elbow, a youth in a fur overcoat, with his legs stretched out towards the fire, smoking a cigar.

"Still raining, Marie?" said he touching his small pointed moustache.

"Yes, M. Leonard," said Marie, "still raining."

He blew a cloud of smoke gracefully from his lips. "Abominable!" said he, with a gesture of impatience. "Is it not, Monsieur?"

I seated myself near him at the table. "Do you return to Fecamp to-night?" I inquired.

Marie, who was stooping over the fire to serve me with coffee from an earthen pot upon the hearth, looked up into his face anxiously for the reply.

"Yes," said he. "The fact is, I must be back in Fecamp before 7 o'clock. We have some old friends coming to dine with us; and," he added, "the worst of it is, I must walk."

"Not pleasant," said I. "The night will be dark. The road is dangerous."

"Dangerous?" said he, with surprise.

"Yes, M. Leonard," said the girl, pouring out my coffee, "it is dangerous."

"In what manner?" said he. "I never heard of highway robbers in these parts."

He cast as he spoke an involuntary glance at a diamond ring which flashed on his little finger against the bright fire.

"I mean," said I, concealing my thought, though half tempted to express it, "I mean that the road is not safe at night, because—

"Because?" he repeated, inquiringly.

I refrained, I know not why, from mentioning what I actually feared, though I seemed to see the wheelwright's angry face and to hear his passionate voice.

"Because," I continued, "the road winds about distractingly among the hills. One might easily step over the sides, which are steep, and so come to harm."

He burst into a pleasant laugh at this answer.

It was a somewhat weak one, I confess. But if I told him my true reason for dissuading him from leaving the inn that night he would, I thought have laughed still louder; so I made no reply, though I followed Marie's uneasy glance toward the windows.

Without it had grown almost dark, but the room, which was warmly lighted by the log fire, was only in shadow near the walls. We sat smoking and sipping our coffee in silence.

Suddenly, Marie, turning her head towards a corner near the door, uttered a low cry.

"Faubert!" she exclaimed, "is that you?"

The wheelwright was seated at a table near the entrance. We had not heard him come in. The light from the fire flashed across his dark face as he looked up quickly at Marie and said:

"Cafe noir."

Marie hastened to supply the order. As she filled the little glass with brandy for his coffee I thought his hand seemed to be trembling; certainly her face had a troubled look. As I was seated in a shadowy corner I could regard the wheelwright without attracting his attention. I was tempted to observe him closely; for there was a cruel expression on his face. He did not once glance towards me. His dark, angry eyes were fixed constantly upon the face of M. Leonard, who sat with his back half turned towards him, looking thoughtfully into the fire. The wheelwright remained, however, only a few minutes. Finishing his coffee quickly he went out of the house as quietly as he had entered it.

Meanwhile Marie had lit the candles, and was moving about the kitchen, occupying herself in various ways, though with a remarkably serious face.

Presently M. Leonard rose from his seat and stood before the fire, buttoning his coat tightly round him. "A light, if you please, Marie," said he, selecting a cigar from his case.

Marie brought him one, her hand trembling very visibly now. "What is the matter, Marie?" said M. Leonard, gently placing his fingers round her wrist and looking earnestly into her face.

"Nothing," said she, turning away—"nothing."

He held out his hand to her, and said in a soft tone: "Good night, Marie."

She went with him to the entrance of the auberge, and I thought that I saw him bend down and kiss her; but it was dark out there, and I may have been mistaken. They spoke a few words together in a whispered tone; then Marie called her father, who was playing dominoes in the other cafe with his customers, and the aubergiste came and shook hands warmly with the young man, and stepped out into the road with him, after which M. Leonard started off quickly and disappeared in the gloom; for it was night now, black night.

Taking a Fecamp newspaper from my pocket I settled down to read, while Marie made preparations for the evening meal. The cheerful log fire in this Normandy Inn, blazing away in the centre of a large open chimney, was a picture which should have raised my spirits after the damp, chilly walk which I had just had. But I could not regain my usual easy and contented state of mind. The forbidding and cruel countenance of the wheelwright troubled me more and more; the fierce blows of his hammer, his angry tone of voice, as he stood in the shed with the daughter of the aubergiste beside him, had aroused my worst suspicions. I had no confidence in the man; he appeared to me capable of committing crime.

At the back of this wide hearth, behind the blazing fire, was an iron tablet with two blackened figures in bas-relief, struggling in a desperate encounter for their very lives. The flames threw a constant change of light and shadow on their faces, seeming to increase at moments the expression of enmity depicted there.

The voice of the aubergiste roused me from meditations which these figures had called up. "Voyons, monsieur!" said he, from the opposite side of the table—"souper." The aubergiste, who was a chubby-faced little man, with gray whiskers and watery eyes, politely held out his snuff box as he spoke, as though it were part of the repast. He offered, as far as I could judge, a pinch to every one who patronized his inn. He was dressed in a blouse over his coat. He kept on his cap as he sat at the table, for he wore that, I observed, at all hours and at all seasons, indoor and out.

If the supper was not sumptuous, it had the merit of being, as far as it went, equal in quality to any that could have been provided. The soup was excellent; the cider was the best to be had in Normandy, the land of cider; and my landlord gave me a glass of Burgundy, and some wall fruit, fresh from the gardens, which an epicure would have praised.

When I had smoked a pipe with the aubergiste, and had chatted a while with his pretty daughter, I bade them both good night and went to my room, above stairs, in a more genial state of mind.

Some hours after I had retired to bed I was awakened by a knocking at the front door, and then I heard voices in the road, talking loudly. At first I took no heed of these sounds, but as the noise prevented me from sleeping I gradually began to grow curious to ascertain the cause of such a disturbance at this late hour; for, on striking a light and referring to my watch, I found that it was past 1 o'clock. By this time the visitors had gained admission, and I now recognized the voice of the aubergiste speaking in his loud tone with some men at the entrance to the inn. My curiosity was aroused. The incident of the afternoon again recurred to me; again I was haunted by that repulsive face of the wheelwright. Could this visit have anything to do with him, or with M. Leonard? I dressed hastily and descended. As I reached the bottom of the staircase I encountered Marie, looking frightened and as pale as death. Without uttering a word she beckoned to me to enter the kitchen. I followed her.

The fire in the hearth had burned out. A small heap of white ashes lay there, and behind them the blackened stone tablet with the wrestlers struggling with each other in their desperate embrace. These were the objects upon which my eyes fell as Marie placed a candle upon the table, and clasping her hands exclaimed: "M. Leonard!"

I demanded anxiously: "What of him?"

"He is lost!" cried the girl.

I looked into her face for a clearer meaning to her words. "Who says this?"

She pointed towards the door. "The two gentlemen who have just arrived."

"How do they know that he is lost?"

"They have been dining," said she, "at his father's house. He had not returned home when they left Fecamp, an hour ago."

I tried to reassure the girl. "But," said I, "that does not prove that he is lost. There may be many ways of explaining his delay in reaching home."

The girl burst into tears. "No," said she—"no. There is only one." Her desire to overcome the grief and the terror which had evidently taken hold of her was painful to witness.

"Tell me," said I, as soon as she became calmer—"tell me what it is you fear. Perhaps I may be able to render you some assistance."

"Indeed you can," said she, looking up gratefully into my face. "The two gentlemen who are now in the cafe with my father, who are resting here on their way home, have evidently been drinking; they cannot take a serious view of the affair. But I, who know the truth, am confident that Faubert is the cause of this trouble. He swore to me this afternoon that he would take the life of M. Leonard to-night."

I uttered an exclamation of horror. "Why," said I, "why did you not mention this before?"

"I did not believe it," said she. "But I do not doubt it now."

"Why not?"

"I have been to his house," said she. "He is not there."

"Are you sure?"

"Absolutely."

I moved quickly towards the door. "The matter is serious," said I; "not a moment must be lost." As I spoke, a loud burst of laughter came from the cafe opposite. I glanced through the glass door, and perceived two men drinking at a table with the aubergiste, as though they had forgotten the existence of their missing friend.

Marie looked at me in despair. "They do not know," said she.

"I will enlighten them at once," I replied, placing my fingers on the latch.

I felt her hand upon my arm. "No," said she; "I implore you."

"But"——

"My father," said she, "I am afraid of him. If he knew of this he would blame me. I am engaged to be married to Faubert."

"To that demon?" I exclaimed, with surprise.

"It is my father's wish," she explained. "Oh, how I hate the man!"

Another burst of laughter reached us.

Quick," said I, "some lanterns. Leave all to me."

Assuming as calm and polite a manner as I could under the circumstances, I entered the cafe and addressed the two men:

"I understand, gentlemen," said I, "that your friend M. Leonard has not returned this evening to his father's house at Fecamp. This fact is not, perhaps, in itself very alarming. But I have reason to believe that he has met with foul play. I will explain myself," I added, as the men began to question me, "more clearly presently. If you will accompany me along the road which M. Leonard told me he should take to-night on his return to Fecamp, we can talk as we go along; for I think we ought to lose no time in starting on this search."

The men readily agreed to my proposal. My manner was earnest, and my words sobered them. They soon showed as much eagerness to depart on the errand as I could have expected.

At my suggestion we proceeded on foot, each with a lantern of his own. It had ceased to rain; but the night was intensely dark and misty. I selected one side of the road, while my companions searched along the centre and upon the other side. Halting constantly for consultation, we marched in a line, flashing our lanterns at every point and at every object in our course.

After I had briefly related to these two friends what I had seen and heard at the inn, we spoke no word, except when we stopped to examine a spot in the valley or on the slope, when one of us never failed to shout out "Leonard!" in a loud tone. The echo of his name, which sometimes resounded in our ears, seemed to me like a voice from the dead, and made me shudder. It was altogether a ghostly errand. The two men, each in a circle of light from his lantern, resembled phantoms as they moved along with a cautious step; and, frequently haunted as I was by the face of the wheel-wright, I imagined I saw Faubert's dark eyes distinctly in the night beyond my lantern, and could only chase away the vision for a moment by closing my eyes.

We had gone a mile or more along the road in the manner described, when suddenly some object, scarcely larger than a glow-worm, flashed distinctly against the light of my lantern. "What's that?" said I to my companions, pointing toward the spot. But without waiting for a reply, I cautiously descended the hill. "A hand!" I cried, "and upon it a diamond ring." The light of my lantern at the same moment fell upon a ghastly face. It was M. Leonard! At first I believed him to be dead, but placing my hand upon his heart I found that it was still beating. A wound above his forehead from some blunt instrument told a dreadful tale. We carried him back to the auberge without uttering a word. He lingered between life and death for days. Marie nursed him with a care which proved how deep a love she bore him. She saved his life.

About a year after this event M. Leonard was married to the daughter of the aubergiste. The wheelwright has never been seen at Senneville since. M. Leonard declared that he saw nothing before he was struck down. The house and shed where Faubert lived and worked are still to be let, but no one seems anxious to succeed him as the wheelwright of Senneville.—[Chamber's Journal.

Why the Bad Boy's Pa Couldn't Get Home

From Peck's Milwaukee Sun.

"Oh, people are not all as good as you and I are," said the grocery man, as he watched the boy making a sneak on a bunch of grapes. "But did you go to the circus?"

"Circus? Well, I should assimilate. And it is a wonder I am not there yet. But, whatever you do, don't ask pa if he was at the circus, 'cause he will kill you. You see pa and I drove up to the race track, where the circus was, in the evening, and after the circus was out we waited to see the men take the tents down, and after they had gone we started to drive home. It was darker than a squaw's pocket, and I drove out on the race-track, and the old horse used to be a racer and he pricked up his ears. Pa took the lines and said he would drive, 'cause we were out pretty late and ma would be nervous. I told pa I didn't believe he was on the right road, but he said he guessed nobody could fool him about the road to town, and bless me if he didn't drive around that track about eight times. Every time we passed the grand stand, which pa couldn't see on account of his eyes, I laffed; but I thought if he knew the road so confounded well I could ride as long as he could.

"After we had rode around the track about eight miles, and I was getting sleepy, I mildly suggested that we had better stop at a house and inquire the way to town, and pa got mad and asked me if I took him for a fool. Then he drove around a couple of times more, and the man that keeps the track he came out with a lantern and said 'Hello!' Pa stopped and asked him what he wanted, and he said, 'O, nothin',' and pa drove on and told him to mind his business. We went around the track again, and when we got to the same place the man was there, and I guess pa thought it was time to inquire the way, so he pulled up and asked the man what he was doing there, and the man said he was minding his own business. Pa asked him if we were on the right road to town, and the man said if we wasn't in a hurry he would like to have us drive on the track all night, as it was a little heavy, and he wanted to get it in condition to speed the colts next day, but if we had to go we could drive out the gate and take the first left-hand road.

"Well, pa was mad, and he wanted to know why I didn't tell him we were on the track, but I told him he seemed to know it all, and it was dangerous to advise a man who knew it all. He didn't speak all the way to town, but when I put out the horse he said, 'Hennery, if this thing gets out your pa will have the reputation of being drunk. If you tell of it you are no friend of mine.' So I shall not say anything about it, 'cause its a bad boy that will go back on his pa."

Your Daughters.

WHAT KIND OF NOVELS DO THE INNOCENT DEAR ONES READ?

It is very unusual to find a mother who is indifferent to her daughter's clothes. Practical minded women will even, in spite of girlish remonstrance, insist on low heels, loose clothes, and warm wraps, and with wise saws and hygienic maxims crush the fashionable yearnings of budding womanhood for french heels, a genteel waist and sleeveless jackets.

But what can be said about the endeavor to provide for our daughters' mental nourishment and intellectual adornments?

There is no more amazing phase of nine-teenth-century feminine development than its passionate and enervating indulgence in nauseous mental pabulum, and the appalling extent to which an unlimited supply of such stuff is furnished to the young. The same woman who is conscientiously careful of the school-companionship of her daughter of twelve or fourteen years is apparently criminally indifferent to the character of her associates in the world of books. She will watch what boy carries her girl's books home from school, but forgets to look below the cover of the new novel that same daughter has brought back from the circulating library, stopping there for it on the way home.

Now this apathy or ignorance in regard to what young girls read is responsible for the destruction of the finer tone of character of many of our children developing into womanhood, and explains a great deal of the frivolity, demoralizing coquetry and unfortunate 'affairs' which from time to time startle the community and bring sorrow and disgrace on highly respectable families.

The Philadelphia Press has discovered tremendous "frauds" in Ohio. So there are—John Sherman and Charlie Foster. There are no bigger frauds anywhere in the country. The Press has been slow to find them out.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

President Arthur lunched with August Belmont at Newport, recently.—Political Exchange.

This is about as important news as we ever hear from the present incumbent of the Presidential chair. He has either just lunched, or gone fishing, like a baby or a school-boy. Thousands of dollars are weekly expended for wire reports about Arthur's last "lunch" or string of bass. What does this nation care how many times the President eats between meals or how many suckers he pulls out of a mill-pond? Read the history of the United States, and you will find no word of any lunching by Washington, except when he lunched off the British soldiery at the expense of Lord Cornwallis. Jefferson was rather more renowned for statecraft than lunches. The Adamses do not appear to have lunched all through the dull season preceding a political campaign. Abe Lincoln had his hands so full of business that he was satisfied to snatch a cold bite anywhere he could get it, without reference to the fact in the newspapers. It was Grant who set the horrible example of lunching to the click of the telegraph key-board, and Arthur has lunched his way from Washington to the Yellowstone and back, and is now fishing and lunching up and down the whole Atlantic coast. And the Great American Free Luncher is a candidate for another term! Turn the lunchers out!—Texas Siftings.

Do Not Forget These Facts.

The official figures of the Ohio election are not yet returned, but the aggregate vote is only about ten thousand short of the largest ever polled in the State. On this great vote the Democrats have beaten the Republicans by a majority of about 13,000.

Heretofore it has always been claimed that with a full vote Ohio was a surely Republican State Experience may be said to have justified that claim. But the last trial of strength has proved to be an exception to the common rule, and has inspired the Democrats with confidence in their ability to repeat their triumph in 1884.

It is needless to talk any more about the different causes of Republican defeat as alleged by a rival or by disappointed leaders of the party. The supreme cause they will not recognize. The Republican party long ago fulfilled its mission. It would not be in power now but for flagrant fraud and scandalous corruption. The days of its remaining existence are numbered.

The people earnestly demand a change in the administration of public affairs. They intend to have glaring abuses reformed and to have economical government instead of extravagance and stealing. They will insist that the President and the Cabinet who are to succeed the present incumbents shall earn their salaries honestly, by remaining at the seat of Government and giving proper attention to the people's business. The time has gone by when public servants can play the part of masters, and draw fall pay for continuous months of idleness and of absence from duty, while appropriating public property to their personal use and pleasure.

That is the political significance of the recent election in Ohio. The Republican party is going, and it is going fast.—N. Y. Sun.

The Democratic Campaign.

MOVEMENTS OF THE CANDIDATES AND STUMPSPEAKERS.

The meetings held by the Democracy in different parts of the state during the past weeks have been remarkably well attended. The enthusiasm is unprecedented for an off year, and the demand for meetings in Democratic counties is increasing. The Republicans, meanwhile, have had listless gatherings, and the party seems to be depressed over the Ohio election. Following are some of the details of the meetings and visitations already appointed for the next week or ten days, those in italics not yet positively fixed.

Other meetings in Western, Central and Northwestern Pennsylvania, will soon be fixed.

Cameron Still the Issue.

At a democratic mass meeting at York on Monday night Lieutenant Governor Black thus spoke of the one issue in this campaign.

It is said by the Republican leaders that Mr. Cameron is not in this contest, that the boss has been banished and his slaves are emancipated. But whose order is it that paralyzes the Constitution of this free Commonwealth? By whose mandate and in whose interest do thirty Senators refuse to apportion the State and decline even to confer with the nearer representatives of the people? The truth is, Mr. Cameron is himself the main struggle at Harrisburg, and if you sustain his Senatorial bodyguard by your ballots you will insure his return to the United States Senate, the sole object of their contumacy. The boss banished! Banished when his personal interests are placed above the right of nearly five millions of people to just representation! Banished when his command, uttered from beyond seas, suspends your supreme law! Banished when even the law which interferes with the old management of the Treasury is treated with more contempt and in flagrant violation of the statute, great treasury balances still lie at usury for the benefit of the pampered favorites of the ring! Ah, no! The boss will go only when the Federalist-Republican party has gone; when you have wrested the State Treasury from his grasp; when next fall you drive his majority from the State Senate; when you elect a Democratic President, who, like Thomas Jefferson, the first Democratic President, will concur in the abolition of the needless internal revenue system and the reduction of that army of useless office-holders who, appointed by the boss, maintain the boss.

The People's Rights.

The right of equal representation is the right preservative of all rights in a free government.

To deny it is revolution, and subversive of Republican institutions.

Taxation without Representation was what our fore-fathers of 1776 protested against, and the rights of people of all parties to be represented fairly is a right not to be measured by money.

The Pennsylvania Democrats claim this right for themselves and concede it to others.

The Pennsylvania Republicans deny it.

In 1880 the Republicans polled 444,704 votes in Pennsylvania.

The Democrats polled 407,428 votes.

Pennsylvania elects 28 Congressmen.

30,433 votes is the quota for one member.

The Republicans are entitled to 14 Congressmen.

The Democrats are entitled to 13 Congressmen.

The excess represents the additional member.

Fair apportionment would give the Republicans 15 members, at most.

Fair apportionment would give the Democrats 13 members, at least.

The Democrats offer the Republicans 17 Congressmen and claim 11.

The Republicans offer the Democrats 9 and claim for themselves 19.

The Democrats while contending for Equal Representation have nevertheless shown a willingness to compromise in order that the Legislature might perform its constitutional duty and adjourn. On the other hand the Republicans have not only scouted the idea of Equal Representation but refuse to accept the liberal Democratic offer of a compromise, and have imposed upon the state a cost of upwards of half a million dollars.

The Ohio Election.

Secretary Newman furnishes the following totals of the vote for governor as a result of the elections: Foraker, 347,064; Hoadly, 359,593; Schumacker, 8,361; Jenkins, 2,785; total vote, 721,464; Hoadley's majority over all, 1,383. The majority for the judicial amendment is 39,418. The second amendment fell short of a majority of 39,543. The regulation amendment receive, 98,050 votes.

An explosion occurred at the Excelsior Gas Squib factory at Kingston on Tuesday, just a little past 1 o'clock. The last employee had just entered the building when the accident occurred. The factory employed eight hands, in ages ranging from 11 to 15. All were injured and it is possible for only three of them to recover. The factory manufactured squibs for use in mines.

Defying the Law.

Attorney General Cassidy appeared in the Dauphin County Court Tuesday and asked for a writ of mandamus on the Sinking Fund Commissioners on account of their failure to invest all the available surplus in the State Treasury in United States or State bonds. Mr. Cassidy said the purpose of the writ was to compel this board to invest, as required by the recent act of Assembly known as the Humes act, the large sums of money now deposited, without interest to the State, with various banks and individuals, and that in presenting it now he simply desired to get a return day and trusted that Saturday next would be an acceptable time. Mr. Weiss said that, as his firm would probably represent some of the defendants, he desired to say that the return day ought to be fixed at, say, sixty days. The case was a grave one and would take time for preparation. Mr. Cassidy protested against such delay, and after some further argument the Judge said: "It does not seem to us that fixing Saturday next is giving reasonable time. The usual time is ten days. Let this writ issue returnable on Monday, November 5, at 10 o'clock."

The effort of the counsel for the republican Sinking Fund Commissioners, to stave off the return of the writ of mandamus asked for by the attorney general to compel them to obey the law which commands them to invest the $4,000,000 of surplus in the Sinking Fund in state or United States bonds, raises a new issue in the present political canvass. One of the best known financial men of Harrisburg, says:

"The law is an eminently proper one and just what the honest people of both parties have demanded and hoped for these many years. Had it been enacted twenty years ago the saving in interest to the state would have been sufficient by this time to have enabled the legislature to wipe out all the state tax on personal property. The people would thus have been relieved to a large extent of their burdens. Now when the law so long waited for has been enacted the auditor general and state treasurer refuse to execute it and when the attorney general undertakes to compel them he is met by an attempt at dilatory proceedings. The people will certainly not rest quiet under such a scheme to deny them the benefit of the law."

Pension Frauds.

The attention of Postmaster General Gresham has been called to the pension agent swindlers who are taking from the poor of the country thousands of dollars yearly by misrepresentations. In reply General Gresham says: "I have no doubt of the truth about these operations, but I do not see how I can help it. To begin with, the mails are for the use of all persons. Then the statutes specify certain classes of individuals to whom registered letters and money orders may be denied Unless the statutes plainly cover a case, such as that of lottery companies, the Postmaster is powerless, for he obviously has no authority to make laws, but to execute such as he finds. I do not think I can do anything to stop this wholesale pension swindling. If a case were brought before me than I could investigate it and see if the statutes cover it." The statute by authority of which General Gresham has stopped the mail of the Louisiana Lottery Company is as follows; "Section 3,894 R. S. No letter or circular concerning illegal lotteries, so called gift concerts or other similar enterprises offering prizes or concerning schemes devised and intended to deceive and defraud the public for the purpose of obtaining money under false pretenses shall be carried in the mail." In several instances General Gresham's predecessors have denied the use of the mails to various swindling firms engaged in defrauding the public under this section under the power conveyed in the phrase, "or concerning schemes devised and intended to deceive and defraud the public." There seems to be little doubt that Judge Gresham will take up the matter if recipients of these claim agent circulars will send him a sample of them.

Judge Foraker, had a superstitious dread of the 9th day of October. He told a friend that he had great faith and believed he would be elected but for the fact that the election came on the 9th of October. On this day, when a child he fell from a walnut tree and broke his shoulder blade, on the same date while a young man, he lost $100 on three card monte; on the 9th of October, while in the army, he fell off a horse and had to go to the hospital for a month, and on the 9th of October, 1876, he lost an important lawsuit, which had changed the course of his life ever since.

Jefferson Monument.

The Thomas Jefferson monument at Monticello, Va., is completed. The monument consists, first, of two foundation courses, the lower twelve feet square and the next eight feet square and each nine inches in height, which cover the graves of Jefferson and four of his kindred who are buried at his head and feet and on either side. These foundation stones are surmounted by a die four feet square at the base and three feet seven inches in height and this by a granite obelisk three feet two inches square at the base and twelve feet eleven inches high. The total height of the monument above the ground is therefore eighteen feet. The inscription, composed by Jefferson, and in accordance with his directions placed on the obelisk, is as follows:

"Here was Buried
Thomas Jefferson,
Author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the Statute of Virginia
For Religious Freedom, and
Father of the University of Virginia."
And upon the die:
"Born April 2, A. D., 1743.
Died July 4, 1826."

On the upper surfaces of the four sides of the lower foundation steps are inscriptions marking the four graves above mentioned as surrounding that of Mr. Jefferson, viz.: The grave of Martha Jefferson, his wife; those of Martha J. Randolph and Marie J. Eppas, his daughters, and of Governor Thomas M. Randolph, his son-in-law. The total expenditure for the work was $8,352.

Albert H. Disston the financial partner of the great saw house of Philadelphia died on Sunday morning. He was but 34 years of age.

The First Electric Telegraph.

The idea of the practical application of the electric telegraph to the transmission of messages was first suggested by an anonymous correspondent of the Scots Magazine, in a letter dated Renfrew, February 1, 1653, signed by C. M., and entitled "An Expeditious Method of Conveying Intelligence." After very considerable trouble Sir David Brewster indentified the writer as Charles Morrison, a native of Greenock, who was bred a surgeon, and experimented so largely in science that he was regarded in Renfrew as a wizard, and eventually found it convenient to leave that town and settle in Virginia, where he died. Mr. Morrison sent an account of experiments to Sir Hans Sloane, the President of the Royal Society, in addition to publishing them anonymously, as stated above. The letter set for a scheme by which a number of wires, equal to the letters of the alphabet, should be extended horizontally, parallel to one another, and about one inch apart, between two places. At every twenty yards they were to be carried on glass supports, and at each end they were to project six inches beyond the last support, and have sufficient strength and elasticity to recover their situation after having been brought into contact with an electric gun-barrel placed at right angles to their length about an inch below them. Close by the last supporting glass a ball was to be suspended from each wire, and at about a sixth or an eighth of an inch below the balls the letters of the alphabet were to be placed on bits of paper, or any substance light enough to raise to the electrified ball, and so continued that each might resume its proper place when dropped. With an apparatus thus constructed the conversation with the distant end of the wires was carried on by depressing successively the ends of the wires corresponding to the letters of the words, until they made contact with the electric gun barrel, when immediately the same characters would rise to the electrified balls at the four stations. Another method consisted in the substitution of bells in place of the letters; these were sounded by the electric spark breaking against them. According to another plan the wires could be kept constantly charged and the signal sent by discharging them. Mr. Morrison's experiments did not extend over circuits longer than forty yards, but he had every confidence that the range of action could be greatly lengthened if due care were given to the insulation of the wires.—From Engineering.

Diamonds.

We ask the attention of purchasers to the Importations of Fine Diamonds now arriving.

To meet the demands of the most critical, and consequently the most prudent, we confine ourselves entirely to the sale of such diamonds as may be pronounced strictly first-class in quality.

Recognizing the fact that inferior stones have little intrinsic value, it has been our business aim to offer only such Diamonds as we can unhesitatingly recommend as a judicious money investment.

In Rubies, Emeralds, Sapphires, Cat's Eyes, and Rare colored Gems of all kinds, we have been fortunate in securing many beautiful specimens.

We desire to extend a most cordial invitation to our customers and others in this city to visit our store, now rendered additionally attractive, by reason of the many elegant goods of all kinds constantly arriving from abroad.

"Reminiscences of Southern Army Life" was the subject of a lecture given in Berwick Association Hall on Saturday evening last, by Major S. P. Hanly. There was a full attendance and the lecture was listened to with great interest and attention throughout. Major Hanly told his story in a charming manner and received universal congratulations from all that heard him.

Mr. Oscar Stevens while preparing to go hunting on Saturday, last, and standing on the porch of Perry's hotel, Central, Columbia county, leaning on his gun it slipped and the hammer striking the outer edge of the porch caused the gun to be discharged, the contents entering the lower part of the stomach and coming out at the left breast. At present writing there is hope of his recovery.

H. W. Patrick, the oldest member of the Bar in Bradford county, died at his residence in Towanda, on the 19th inst. He studied law under Judge Elwell and was admitted to practice in 1838. He was an able lawyer and an enterprising citizen. For more than forty years his extensive business required his annual attendance upon the sitting of the Supreme Court.

We were shown a very beautiful gold watch by Mr. Wm. R. Cox of Greenwood on Thursday last. He had just received it by express from his son W. W. Cox of Sioux Falls, D. T. The watch is stem winding and setting and is probably as small a watch as is made of its kind. It was for a present to his sister Ida.

Mr. L. P. Osman, of Catawissa who has been sick with typhoid pneumonia for the past month died at his residence on Monday morning. He was about thirty-two years of age and was born near Roaringcreek. Almost three years ago he began the drug business in Catawissa. Last spring he sold a half interest in his establishment to Dr. C. C. Willits. At the time of Mr. Osman's death the business was conducted in the firm name of Osman & Willits.

The number of years required by a medical student to attend lectures at some medical institution in order to obtain the degree of M. D. is less in the United States than any other country. The following is the number of years required in each country: In Sweden, ten; Norway, eight; Denmark, seven; Belgium, Holland, Italy and Switzerland, six; Russia, Portugal, Austria and Hungary, five; France, England and Canada, four; United States, two or three; Spain, two.

The Danville nail works which is now in full operation employ one hundred and twenty-five men and boys, and work until half past nine every day to fill their orders. The product of this mill per year is about 60,000 kegs of cut nails and spikes. The works are owned by a stock company, organized in December, 1882. There is an excellent opportunity in Bloomsburg for a similar organization. Milton but recently organized a company, and we now read of one starting in Lock Haven.

A visit to Centralia this week showed us that that thriving village has greatly improved since our last trip there two years ago. Many new buildings have been erected, and business of all kinds appears to be active. Among a few of the things that Centralia needs are sidewalks and crossings. An occasional street lamp would help to dispel the gloom that settles down upon it after the lamps in the stores are extinguished. With its rapidly growing population, these things will probably be provided in a short time.

In Clearfield the public and private buildings are heated from one set of boilers, operated by a steam heating company. One of the papers speaking of the success of the heating says: We have been warmed up for two weeks, and are obliged to keep our doors and windows open as we did on the 4th of July. Similar heating apparatus is being put in at Bellefonte. The system is that introduced by Dr. Bishop of Lockport, N. Y. who recently interviewed the city councils of Philadelphia in regard to heating that city by steam.

Hunting hair pins is the newest diversion of the boys in Pittsburg. The Commercial Gazette says: "Last winter it got to be quite the thing for a fellow to coax his young lady friends to give him hair pins, but now the craze is to get them without the girl's knowing what you are about. If you can steal the pin out of her hair, that's the way to do it. If you can pick up one that has fallen from her head that's a deal better. Some fellows have followed a girl for squares, just because a hair pin looked as though it meant to drop soon. What do they do with them? Put them into an album. They get scrap books, and push the pins through like needles. Then the girl's name, style of beauty, and estimated age are written below.

An attempt was made on Sunday night to rob the safe in the Treasurer's office at Sunbury. The robbers effected an entrance by cutting through the brick wall. They then forced open the iron shutters leading to the back yard, to afford them an easy way of escape if observed. The iron door of the safe was drilled, but it is supposed the thieves were frightened away as they did not succeed in getting the door open. A man by the name of Cook was arrested on Monday for stealing potatoes. He also stole some tools from the New Hotel in course of erection. Whether he is one who attempted the safe robbery is not yet fully known. Sunbury has been disturbed with burglaries of stores and dwellings for several weeks past.

On Wednesday evening Henry C. Everett, of Orangeville, left Bloomsburg about eight o'clock with a team of colts. When he reached the white school house between Bloomsburg and Light Street, the colts became frightened and ran away. Mr. Everett tried to stop them but in vain. He was thrown from the wagon and either run over or dragged along as he was found at the cross road near the Light Street road, with his jaw broken, his one arm terribly mangled and many severe bruises about the head and body. Several teams passed over his body while lying in the road but he was unable to attract their attention. He was taken to the house of James Stevens, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Megargell of Orangeville. At this writing he is in a critical condition.

Centre Notes.

Some thieves entered the cellar of Samuel Hagenbuch taking meat, cream, butter, a meat barrel, etc. This is the second call of this kind Mr. Hagenbuch has had.

On Saturday night while Mr. A. C. Creasy was driving to the grange his horse became frightened and upset the buggy, throwing the occupants, (A. C., his wife and child) out. Dark as it was there was nobody hurt.

Quite a number of Centre people attended the Washingtonville Fair, and report a good time.

The schools will commence Monday Oct. 29th, with a full score of teachers, and a good winter's work is expected.

The School Board met Saturday last, among the business transacted was taking the new house at Lime Ridge off the contractor's hands.

Rev. Bodine preached an excellent sermon Sunday last at the Hidlay church.

Quite a number of our sportmen are killing rabbits. Are they not ahead of time?

Rev. Houtz will have meeting for a few evenings commencing Nov. 1st, at Hidlay church. The Lord's Supper will be administered on the following Sunday.

A. Bidleman of Fowlersville has sold his entire stock of goods to Sylvester Kelchner and will quit the mercantile business at that place.

Niles and Livsey at Mauch Chunk.

A republican mass meeting was announced to be held at Mauch Chunk at Wednesday evening of last week. Niles and Livsey the republican candidates were to make addresses. Wednesday evening came, the speakers arrived and no audience could be gathered to hear them. The court house was brilliantly lighted, and "Jonesy" the janitor, (who is a democrat) says he waited a long while for the grand mass meeting to come, but it failed to make its appearance. One of Shakespeare's plays the "Merchant of Venice" was represented in the Opera House the same evening, but it does seem possible that all the republicans in Mauch Chunk should so neglect their candidates as to attend the theatre. Mauch Chunk is largely republican, and is the home of General Lilley, who should have marshalled his forces in a better manner. Can it be that the people have forgotten the republican candidates?

EDITORS OF THE COLUMBIAN.—Permit space in your paper for the insertion of a brief article in relation to some recent occurrences in the vicinity of the Kreamer school district. A few evenings since there was a school meeting held at the Kramer school house to elect a teacher for the next term of school.

The director in charge presented the names of six applicants three of whom were females. It was proposed by one of the citizens present that Miss Coleman of Orange be selected to teach the school as she had taught the summer term successfully and satisfactorily. But it was thought by some present that a male teacher would be better in some respects, consequently one was selected and because the selection did not suit a certain citizen of the district he is disappointed, dissatisfied and wonderfully worried about it. But as the rest of the citizens of this locality are quiet and aggreeable to associate and deal with, such persons can not very much disturb the peace nor stop the progress of the community. I would say to him and all of like inclinations and disposition reform your ways as citizens that you may be looked upon with deserved respect and favor.

The new road leading up the hollow from Philip Appleman's to Thomas Coleman's that was opened last fall is not a passible road, that is, it can not be traveled both ways at the same time because there are no passing places and the supervisor should see that it shall be entirely completed before it be taken off of the contractor's hands. All the taxpaying citizens of the township are interested in this matter and should feel concerned in the completion of the road before the money they have paid in way of taxes is unjustly appropriated.

Spigelmeyer—Eyerly.

The marriage of Mr. Charles D. Spigelmeyer, of Mifflinburg, Union county, and Miss Minnie A. only daughter of Michael F. Eyerly, Esq., took place at the residence of the bride's parents on Market street, on Wednesday, October 24th, at one o'clock, Rev. F. P. Manhart officiating, assisted by Prof. Waller. About one hundred guests were present. At the appointed hour the bridal procession entered the sitting room in the following order: Miss Albright of Lancaster, and Mr. George Pooler of Berwick, Miss Hattie Bidleman of Bloomsburg and Mr. E. K. Adams of Berwick, after whom came the bride and groom, and took their place under a festoon of evergreen while Prof. Niles played the wedding march. After the ceremony the guests were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Spigelmeyer by H. V. White Esq. D. Bowers and G. P. Ringler ushers, and then refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Eyerly's well known hospitality renders it unnecessary to say anything of the quality and abundance of good things that were provided. The table fairly groaned.

The bride was attired in white satin trimmed with Duchess point lace, an elaborate sash with sprays of orange blossoms, and wore a wreath of orange blossoms on her head. Miss Albright wore a tarleton trimmed with Irish point lace, and Miss Bidleman wore India Mull with spanish lace. The bridesmaids carried baskets of natural flowers.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and elegant presents, embracing silver ware, glass ware, china, table linen, pictures, lace, placques, &c. The groom's gift was a diamond ring. Among the persons present from out of town were the father, mother and sister of the groom, of Mifflinburg, Hudson Owen and wife, Mrs. McMurtrie of Berwick. Mr. and Mrs. J. Patterson, Mrs. P. F. Eyerly of Danville, Rev. and Mrs. E. Sharretts of Espy, Mrs. Smeck Mrs. Hayhurst, Miss Pfahler, Mr. J. Reifsnyder, of Catawissa.

Mr. and Mrs. Spigelmeyer took the evening train on the N. & W. B. road to Philadelphia and New York. They will return to Mifflinburg and go to housekeeping. May joy always attend them!

It appears to be a lamentable fact that the Record left Mifflin some time this week. Poor Record! "Thy days have been few and full of sorrow." The history of the Mifflinville Record might suggest to us young men when we start out in life that our welfare depends partially upon the people and not the welfare of the people upon us. And that after all, old people know a thing or two, However wise "we" are. When we say "we run this." "We have pleanty backing." "We" found ourselves getting in a position to "bust" as he said a few weeks ago.

Pioneer Life.

"Romance and Tragedy of Pioneer Life" is the latest and, unquestionably, the best contribution yet made to this department of history. The reader finds it wonderfully absorbing from the first chapter to the last, and then there is a powerful impulse to go back and read it again. The trials and successes of the early settlers; their wars and treaties with the Indians; captures, escapes, and almost miraculous recoveries of women and children; great conspiracies, which only lacked success to change the history of the world and turn backward for a whole century the course of civilization upon these shores; romance, sentiment, toil, tribulation, and gigantic achievement of a class of brave and hardy men and women, of whom their descendants can not learn enough, will probably never find a more complete and attractive record than is supplied in the work under discussion.

It is nervously, yet conscientiously written. The narrative is in the dramatic style, with a thoroughly appreciable predominance of that peculiar metaphor which always declares the writer a patient student of the classics. Had not Homer tuned his lofty lyre, observed Cicero, the valor of Achilles had remained unsung. The valor of our pioneers was never surpassed, and, with another Homer to celebrate their achievements, the grandest epic in all literature would enrapture our age.

The sub-setting of thrilling incident in this book, hair-breadth escapes, and a thousand eventualities, even more remarkable than those of fiction, garnish every chapter, and add such restful variety as relieves and inspirits the mind, while they pour into it the very cream of historic lore. It must interest every reader, but for the young and middle-aged American, of either sex, the fascination of its pages is irresistible, and their story should be known to every one who cares to know upon what strange and soul-thrilling events the fabric of our Western Empire is erected. It tells this story, and baptizes its subject in the everlasting fame which belongs to civilized liberty in every portion of the heritage of God.

In this commendation it would be unfair to author and publishers to overlook the style in which the book is produced—its beautiful type and heavy, toned paper; great variety and artistic excellence of illustration; neat and substantial binding; and the score of minor details which conspire to make a volume worthy of a place upon every center table and in every library. The publishers, Messrs. Jones Brothers and Co., of Cincinnati, are well known as publishers of many of the best books sold in the past fifteen years.

The Romance and Tragedy of Pioneer Life.—A popular account of the heroes and adventurers who, by their valor and war-craft, beat back the savages from the borders of civilization, and gave the American forests to the plow and the sickle, &c., Royal Octavo, 1000 pp., 100 illustrations, by A. L. Mason, A. M., with an introduction by John Clark Ridpath, LL. D. Jones Brothers & Co., Publishers, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis and Dallas, Texas. Sold by subscription only.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Rheumatic Syrup Co:

Butler, N. Y., April 11, 1882.

Gentlemen—I wish to acknowledge the great benefit I received from the use of your Rheumatic Syrup. I was sick for some time, and under the doctor's care, with what he called the liver complaint and rheumatism in my back and shoulders. Could find nothing to relieve me until I commenced taking Rheumatic Syrup. After taking one bottle I could feel a decided improvement. I continued its use a short time and it cured me. I most cheerfully recommend it to any afflicted in like manner. MRS. V. H. ROE.

WANT OF FAITH.

Bald-Headed Suggestions.

Chicago Telegram.

A bald-headed man is refined, and he always shows his skul-sure.

It has never been decided what causes bald heads, but most people think it is dan'd rough.

A good novel for bald heads to read—"The Lost Heir."

What does a bald-headed man say to his comb? We meet to part no more.

Motto for a bald-head—Bare and fur-bare.

However high a position a bald-headed man holds, he will never comb down in the world.

The bald-headed nan never dyes.

Advice to bald-headers—Join the Indians, who are the only successful hair-raisers.

What does every bald-headed man put on his head? His hat.

You never saw a bald-headed man with a low forehead.

Shakspear says—There is a divinity that shapes our ends.

Bald men are considered the coolest-headed men in the world.

It was perfectly bear-berous in the forty wicked children to salute the white-pated Elijah with the taunting remark, "Go up, thou bald-head."

A bald head is eloquently suggestive of premature piety.

Ice cream and chocolate caramels are the leading precedents of incipient baldness.

Bald headed eagles are natives of the Bald mountains.

Never go after a man, or woman either in a "perfectly bald-headed fashion."

The bald are always truly good. This accounts for Ben Butler having demonstrated himself such an exemplary Governor.

The venerable bald-head who has so long been the target for the wit of the gallery gods as he sat in a front row enjoying the ballet will rejoice to know that the day of his deliverance is at hand. The Telegram has heard of a party who has invented a wonderful hair restorative, warranted to cover the baldest head with a thick growth of glossy hair in only seventy-two hours. The remedy is said to be extracted from the inner bark of the mesquite tree. The restorative produces different shades of hair. In order to avoid answering numerous queries, we realize the pertinence of saying that we do not know the name of this preparation, or the address of its inventor.

Cured with Snake Venom.

A RATTLESNAKE'S FANGS DRAWN UPON TO BAFFLE A CASE OF LOCKJAW.

The last number of the Philadelphia Medical News contains a recital of a successful experiment with snake venom as a curative for tetanus by Dr. A. O. Ameden, of Glens Falls, N. Y. Being in a locality in which the rattlesnakes were fearfully numerous, and having previously given some thought to the subject, Dr. Ameden resolved to make the test.

"Availing myself of the services of an experienced snake catcher," he says, "I soon obtained venom fresh from the fangs of one of the reptiles; with this I moistened the point of a hypodermic syringe and inserted it beneath the cuticle in the upper dorsal region near the spine. Symptoms of snake poisoning rapidly followed, with a decided amelioration of the tetanic spasms and rigidity, which entirely ceased at the end of ten hours, and the patient enjoyed a quiet sleep of six hours duration. Twenty hours after the insertion of the poison, however, rigidity with slight spasms again came on. A second introduction of the venom was made as before, and no further trouble with tetanus was experienced, and the patient made a fairly rapid recovery. But extreme prostration followed the last introduction of venom, which necessitated active alcoholic stimulation as in all cases of accidental snake poisoning. There was no diffuse inflammation from the wounds, as frequently happens when persons are bitten in the limbs by these snakes, and no other results that would deter me making a second experiment in the same manner. I am of the opinion that the second insertion of the venom was too much, and might have been withheld. I believe that this snake venom, which has been propererly called 'crotaline,' can be used with comparative safety, and may yet prove to be a valuable remedial agent in tetanus, and possibly in some other spasmodic diseases."

How Accidents Run in Streaks.

New York World.

Accidents, like murders, suicide and crimes of all sorts, run in streaks. The phenomenon is as easily demonstrated by experience as it is apparently impossible of explanation, except on the philosopher's theory that there is in all things appertaining to life a wave-like motion, like the regular swinging of the pendulum of a clock, which in itself is one of the unfathomable mysteries of existence, dimly discovered but beyond the firm grasp of the human intellect.

In the case of suicide and violent crimes the unconscious imitativeness of diseased minds has been held to furnish an explanation, but it can be applied to accidents as little as to fires, which exhibit the same gregarious tendency. "It never rains but it pours," is the statement of an experience common to all times.

Steamship accidents furnish a notable illustration. Everybody remembers the series of mishaps that befell the steamers of a French transatlantic line some eight or ten years ago without fault of management, and the subsequent streaks of ill luck that overtook German and English steamers after periods of absolute security on the ocean ferry. What New Yorker has forgotten the summer of the Seawaha-ka's burning, with its amazing record of sound steamers wrecked by fire or accident?

"There are four battles in our business," remarked a dry-goods merchant. "The first battle is to secure consignments from desirable manufacturing houses; the second to provide the money with which to make advances on those consignments; the third, to sell the goods after they have been consigned; and the fourth, to get the pay for them. And the hardest fight of all is the first—to obtain the right consignments. Any fool can sell goods that everybody wants to buy, but it requires a judgment to have on sale the goods that the public most wants.

CREAM TOAST.—Cut stale bread half an inch thick and dip them in sweet cream. Fry a delicate brown in butter. Serve plain at breakfast or spread with any kind of jam or jelly and use for desert.

Wipe your pen after using, and it will last the longer. Remember, a pen is saved, a pen is earned.

Feeding Turnips.

The Dairy.

Feeding turnips to milking cows is objected to on account of the ill flavor communicated to the milk, and which spoils it for any good use, but it is not necessary that this ill flavor should be given to the milk. It is caused by the very volatile odor of the roots, which is absorbed by the stomach, and then by the blood, and lastly by the milk. A large part of it is carried off by the perspiration through the skin and a large part through the kidneys. The reason of the rapidity of this effect of feeding turnips is the large proportion of water which they contain, and that the water is very quickly absorbed by the blood and dispersed through the system, and as quickly got rid of through the skin and the kidneys. It is precisely the same with onions, garlic and other strong flavored weeds, and also with impure water. But this very rapid transpiration of the water gives a clue to a ready means of avoiding the objectionable effect referred to. If turnips are fed immediately after milking, night and morning, the odor passes off and does not affect the next morning. It is not safe to feed them before milking, unless done immediately before, as water is absorbed from the stomach into the blood with great rapidity, and the odor would begin to reach the milk in a few minutes. The odor of garlic may be prevented—it is said—in somewhat the same manner, but we have not personally tried the effect for want of the garlic. But it is so reported by the dairyman who says he was troubled with the smell of garlic or wild onion in his milk. To obviate this he put the cows in the stable at about three o'clock each afternoon, and fed on hay and gave them hay as usual. The result was all he anticipated; a rest of three hours allowed the scent to pass off in the other secretions, though previously it very strongly flavored both milk and butter. The same course, he suggests, would probably be an advantage when the milk tastes of other foul weeds in the pasture, and he is probably right.

The Use of Coal Ashes.

Germantown Telegraph.

We see the question often asked, "What is the use of coal ashes? The question has never been satisfactorily answered." This is a mistake. It has. As a manurial agent they are of no perceptible value. As an agent in loosening heavy soil they are of value. We have experimented with them for a number of years, and that is about all that we can make of them. We applied some years ago, about two inches of the ashes all over the garden, the soil of which was rather heavy, and they had a direct tendency to make it more friable. Their presence was observable for several years; but that they acted in any degree as a fertilizer we could not discern, nor do we believe they did. The best use to make of coal ashes is to construct with them good garden walks and carriage ways, placing all the rough, coarse at the bottom, and roll them well. There is nothing better, or so good, for these purposes. They are dry five minutes after a rain, and never become actually soft, even in a thaw, which causes a gravel way to yield so freely to horses and vehicles. They resist very much also the growth of grass and weeds, and garden walks surfaced with them and thoroughly rolled will not requre half as much cleaning as those where either gravel or earth is used.

We see coal ashes recommended for a great many purposes, where it is to act as a manure, as a protector against insects, and so on; but we do not believe they have any more effect than so much road dust or any fine dry soil.

A Paying Poultry Farm.

A poultry farm of 8,000 Plymouth Rocks is owned and carried on by A. C. Hawkins at Lancaster, near Boston, Massachusetts. He calculates to have about 8,000 fowls every fall and carries over about 2,500 laying hens through the winter. At the present time he has 12,000 including all sizes. His farm contains twenty-five acres, and his poultry buildings occupy an acre and a half. They are situated on the south slope of a hill, and comprise six or seven sheds 200 feet in length. Each shed is divided into apartments of 12 by 20 feet, and about twenty five hens are kept in each division. A yard is made in front of each apartment, so that the members of each are by themselves. Mr. Hawkins believes that if confined poultry have all their wants attended to, they will do as well in egg-production as if allowed free range. He bases this belief upon several tests. In hatching time he sets 200 hens on one day, and puts 500 eggs in an incubator, which is due to hatch on the same day, the chickens from which will be distributed among the 200 hens. Boston is one of the best markets for fancy prices for eggs and poultry, and his sales of fowls and eggs for hatching at fancy prices are large, about ninety per cent. being profit. He also has a standing order for sixty to ninety dozens of eggs daily, for which he gets the highest market price. Mr. Hawkins began at the age of twenty one with 100 hens, and by careful management and economy his business has enlarged, so that at the age of twenty-nine he has a very handsome income. The manure from the poultry is quite an item; he sold last year 500 barrels at $1.50 a barrrel.—Cultivator.

How to tell Good Butter.

Mr. Robert Hall, an Ohio butter inspector, says that where butter is properly churned, both as to time and to temperature, it becomes firm with very little working, and it is tenacious; but its most desirable state is waxy, when it is easily modeled into any shape, and may be drawn out a considerable length without breaking. It is then styled gilt-edge. It is only in this state butter possesses that rich nutty flavor and smell, and shows up a rich golden yellow color which imparts so high a degree of pleasure in eating it, and which increases its value many fold. It is not always necessary, when it smells sweet, to taste butter in judging it. The smooth unctuous feel in rubbing a little between the finger and thumb expresses at once its rich quality; the nutty smell and rich aroma indicate a similar taste; and the bright golden glistening cream-colored surface shows its height of cleanliness. It may be necessary at times to use the trier, or even use it until you become an expert in testing by taste, smell and rubbing.

Young Mr. Brown was making an evening call, when his best girl's little brother approached him and begged the loan of his whistle. "Whistle?" queried Mr. Brown, "I have no whistle." "Well, papa says you have," continued the wingless angel, "and that you are all the time wetting it."

Household Aids.

To prevent a door from creaking apply a little soap in the hinges.

To clean steel, rub the article with a piece of wash-leather dipped in kerosene oil.

The luster of morocco is restored by varnishing it with the white of an egg. Apply with a sponge.

When tins are much blackened by the fire they should be scoured with soap, water and fine sand.

If brooms are wetted in hot suds once a week they will last much longer, and always sweep like a new broom.

Kid shoes can be kept soft and free from cracks by rubbing them once a week with pure glycerine or castor oil.

A little saltpeter or carbonate of soda mixed with the water in which flowers are placed will keep them fresh for two weeks.

To remove egg stains from silver spoons take a little common salt between the thumb and finger and rub the stain briskly. Then wash in hot suds.

To cure felons, mix one ounce of Venice turpentine with one ounce of water, stir with a rough stick until thick; then wrap a good coating of it around the finger with a cloth. Another method is to wrap the part affected with a linen cloth dipped in a tincture of lobella.

To polish marble cut the surface with a piece of fine sandstone, using fine sand and water. When the whole surface has been equally gone over take a piece of felt or old hat wrapped around a weight, dip it in fine emery powder and rub the marble until all the marks left by the former process are worked out. Afterwards finish the polish with putty, powder and fine rags.

To make black Japan varnish mix together burnt umber, eight ounces; true asphaltum, three ounces; boiled linseed oil, one gallon; grind the umber with a little of the oil; add the asphaltum, previously dissolved in a small quantity of the oil by heat, mix, add the remainder of the oil, boil, cool and thin with a sufficient quantity of oil of turpentine.

To make crystal varnish take genuine pale Canada balsam and rectified oil of turpentine, equal parts; mix, place the bottles in warm water, agitate well, set it inside in a moderatly warm place, and in a week pour off the clear. It is used for maps, prints, drawings and other articles of paper; also to prepare tracing paper and to transfer engravings.

POTATO PANCAKES.—They make a most excellent dish for supper. Serve with the same embilishments in the way of pickles, sauces as you would do were the dish you were offering fried oysters. Grate a dozen medium sized potatoes, after peeling them and washing thoroughly. Add the yolks of three eggs, a heaping teaspoonful of flour, and if they seem too dry, a little milk will do to thin them, with a large teaspoonful of salt, and lastly the whites of the three eggs beaten stiff, and thoroughly beaten in with the potatoes. Heat your griddle and put butter and lard in equal proportions on it, and fry the cakes in it until they are brown. Make them a third larger than the ordinary size of the pancake.

CHICKEN SOUP.—A delicious chicken soup is made by cutting up one chicken and putting it in your kettle with nearly two quarts of water, a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. When about half done add two teaspoonfuls of barley or of rice. When this is done remove the chicken from the soup, tear or cut part of the breast into small pieces, add to the soup with a cup of cream. The rest of the chicken may be reserved for salad or for chicken croquettes.

CIDER JELLY.—Delicious jelly can be made of cider. To one pint of clear, sweet cider allow one pint of cold water, two pounds of sugar, one package of gelatine, one large pint of boiling water. Soak the gelatine until it is entirely dissolved in the cold water; then add to this the sugar, a spoonful of cinnamon, the juice of two lemons, the grated rind of two, then the galatine Add the cider last; then put all in a thick flannel bag and let it drain. Do not squeeze it at all. Put it in bowls or glasses and set it away to cool. Sherry or Madeira wine may be substituted for the cider.

Somewhat Mixed.

An Ohio man, who had visited Gotham and got many new ideas, returned home and re marked most of his goods, so that he could say the price of this and that was so much, with so much off. Everything seemed to work pretty well for a week or so, when one of the clerks said he needed a little more posting.

"For instance," he exclaimed, "we are giving twenty off on all woodenware?"

"Yes."

"And pails are twenty cents apiece?"

"Yes."

"Then every time a man wants a pail he gets it for nothing, and if he takes two I give him twenty cents?"

"James, are you a born fool?" demanded the merchant.

"No, sir!" was the prompt reply "I've got rid of the eight dozen pails we had stored up stairs in less than a week, and have promised five dozen more. If you have a clerk who pleases customers more than I do trot him out."

Naming a Lake.

Years ago it was discovered that a certain lake which had long been considered the head of the Mississippi, had no claim to that honor. The explorers found a new and smaller lake from which the river took its rise. A discussion arose as to what name would be appropriate for it. The story is that it was decided in this way:

"Let's make a new name by coining a word," said an old voyager. "Some of you learned ones tell me what is Latin for true."

"Veritas," answered a scholar.

"Well, now, what is the Latin for head?"

"Caput."

"Now write the two words together by syllables."

The scholar wrote on a strip of birch-bark "veritas caput."

"Read it."

The five syllables were read.

"Now drop the first and last syllables and you'll have a good name for this lake." And "Itasca it was.

BEET SALAD.—Young beets boiled skinne l and sliced make a very pretty salad if mixed in layers with hard-boiled eggs. They should be seasoned with pepper, salt and butter, and a little vinegar or lemon juice.

HOW TO FERTILIZE FRUIT TREES.—Here and there on all farms and in most fruit gardens will be seen an occassional tree or grape-vine, which seems to lack vigor—does not grow well, and yet seems to have no particular disease. The probabilities are that the tree is dying of starvation and needs a supply of food. When you give it this ration, do not pile a load of manure around the trunk of the tree or the body of a grape-vine. That is just the place where it will do the least good. Nearest the trunk of the tree, the roots are all large The fibrous roots—the feeders, are further off near the ends of the roots. These only can take up the nutriment. It is always safe to assume that the roots extend as far from the trunk in every direction as do the limbs of the tree, and to properly fertilize, spread the manure all over that area. Then fork it in and you have done a good work and done it well. If some disease has begun its work on the tree, you will put the tree in a healthy, vigorous condition, the better enabling it to successfully contend against its enemies. We have seen numerous old pear and apple trees, bearing poor and gnarled fruit, which the owners consider of no value, but which such treatment as we have outlined above would restore to their original usefulness.—Orange County Farmer.

SHUT UP.—Smiler Colfax peeps from under his load of Credit Mobilier scandal long enough to say that "the Republicans will elect their candidate, not so much on account of the strength as it seems to be predestined that the Democrats shall remain out of power." He is not the first predestinarian who has had the wind knocked out of him. His political theology will unquestionably get a bad shaking up in 1884, and he will know of a certainty that the Republican party must go, just as he had to get out of public life and for the same reason—robbing the Treasury

"What's that thing?" asked a dairyman, as a chromo peddler held up a picture in which all the hues of the rainbow were displayed in reckless profusion, without regard to harmony or correctness.

"A cow," replied the smiling art connoisseur, with a show of pride.

"A cow?" gasped the milk handler, "Well, that's the first time I ever saw a green cow browsing on salmon-colored grass. Here John!" he yelled to the hired man; "bring me the gun!"

But the chromo fiend climbed the fence and made a break for the woods.

In the Pilot House.

"Yes, sir; this kind of work obliges a man to keep sober as a judge. Of all men in the world, steamboat pilots and railroad engineers should let liquor alone. For on their clearness of sight and coolness of head depends the safety of life and property."

Keeping his hand on the wheel as he said this, Mr. A. Brockman, of No. 293 Silver street, Chicago, added: "Of course, some of 'em drink; but the sober ones have the best positions and the best pay. Yes, the work and exposure sometimes tells on us; but for my part, I find PARKER'S TONIC to be all the Invigorant I need. I've got a bottle aboard here now; never go on a trip without it. When I havent any appetite, or am in any way out of sorts, it sets me up in no time. If drinking men would use the Tonic, it would help 'em, to break off. (No, that isn't a light-house; it's a star, low down near the water.) As I was saying, the Tonic is new life bottled up. You see that flag-staff? Well, with a bottle of PARKER'S Tonic in the locker I can keep malaria as far from me as that, all the time. My wife has used it for three years for summer complaints and colds, and as an invigorant, when she's tired out from overwork. She says the Tonic is a daisy. Good-bye! Don't break your neck going below."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior articles under the name of ginger, and as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation, itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the fac-simile signature of HISCOX & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.
